“The identity of an artist is only as powerful as the impact they have on their community.

My mission is to inspire collective mindfulness through art. I paint live to immerse others around me into the creative process from start to finish. This allows for our stories to align, and for us to connect through observatory and interactive shared experiences.

I use symbols in my paintings to portray personal insights that hold significance to me. Symbols are so powerful because they are universal and timeless representations. They allow us as individuals to ascribe unique meanings to.

The message I am conveying in my art is the message of hope. It's about the power of positivity and the action of turning what can be seen as negative into something that is positive. I am encouraging this simple flip in perspective for viewers to carry into their own lives.”
